mouth floor the Big Green was subdued to the tune of 28-23. The latter victory was a big feather in the hat of the Blue, especially since only a week before Dartmouth had defeated Harvard by the overwhelming score of 45-18. The Panther's win is a sure indication that the team has improved since their Boston trip earlier in the season.

Middlebury 33; Norwich 30

Although the score is evidence of a close game, it cannot be unreservedly accepted as such. The score at Rutland a few weeks back may be considered a more truthful comparison of the strength of the two teams. Norwich failed to show any improvement in play over their first contest with the Blue and White. The small floor and low ceiling proved more of a drawback for the Blue than for the Horsemen, and the former were hampered in their shooting and floor work throughout the game. In addition to this, the officiating was more or less farcical, as is proven by the fact that nearly a personal foul was called on

HOMEcoming PROVES SUCCESS: PLENTY OF SNOW FOR CARNIVAL

Fraternities Hold Initiation Banquets and Informals.

The first Washington's Birthday week-end home coming for alumni proved to be a distinct success. The weather man provided perfect winter weather and the basketball and hockey teams staged excellent performances for the entertainment of returning alumni.

With a fresh fall of snow conditions were ideal for winter sports and the Inter-Fraternity Winter Sports Carnival proved a decided success. Much amusement was occasioned by the snow shoe and ski obstacle races in which the contestants started on the hill south of Hepburn Hall and were required to cross the road at the foot of the hill, jump over a huge pile of snow and a row of hurdles, go under a rope, and through a barrel.

President and Mrs. Moody were at home to returning alumni after 4:30 Friday afternoon.

Many took advantage of the opportunity to attend chapel and classes on Saturday. Nearly all of the fraternities held their initiation banquets during the week-end. Among the out-of-town alumni who returned for the week-end were the following:

Spanish Carnival Mar. 9 to Have Novel Program

Plans for the Spanish Carnival to be held in the Gymnasium, Saturday evening, March 9, are progressing well and the affair promises to be a high light in the social season.

The scene of the Carnival will be strikingly colorful and festive. The decorations committee wishes to suggest the world Fair now being held in Barcelona and Seville. Several entertaining novelties will be included in the program.

The Carnival is a subscription dance and is open to the entire college. Tickets are now on sale.

All attending are requested to wear costumes to add to the atmosphere of the affair. Prizes will be awarded for the most attractive and most original costumes for both the men and the women. The costumes need not be Spanish, nor need they be elaborate. Any who wish to hire a costume for the evening, however, may do so by getting in touch with the following companies: Hooker-Howe Costume Co., Haverhill, Mass.; H. Buckley & Son, 22 Lyman St., Springfield, Mass.; Ware Costumers, 10 Beach St., Boston, Mass.

FIGHTING SEXTET WHIPS WILLIAMS

By WARD S. YUNKER

Coach Clogston's fast skating Blue and White hockey team ended its season in a blaze of glory Saturday afternoon by trouncing the University of Vermont sextet 5 to 0. The game was fast throughout and while the result was never in doubt, the action kept the interest of the crowd until the final whistle.

The game started fast with the Middlebury forward line making an attack on the Vermont net. Crocker took a shot, but Hendricks saved. A few minutes later Hendricks was sent sprawling to make a nice save of a hard shot by Makela. The Panther forwards were swarming all around the net and Kelley nearly slipped a backhand shot through, but the Vermont goalie saved just in time.

Makela scored the first goal when he picked up a loose puck about 15 feet out and sent a fast shot by Hendricks. A couple of minutes later Makela came in fast to take a rebound off Hendricks' pads and whisk the disc into the net for a second goal.

Mercier made the first Vermont attack, but Douglas easily parried his shot and cleared to Nelson. A bit of passwork gave Kelley the rubber and he let go a hard shot which hit Hendricks' pads and rebounded. Crocker came in fast from the wing and drove

TROUBADOUR SPEAKS TO LARGE AUDIENCE THURSDAY EVENING

Vachel Lindsay Lectures and Reads From His Poems.

Vachel Lindsay, troubadour, spoke before a large and enthusiastic audience in the Congregational church last Thursday evening. Intoned readings of his vivid masterpieces constituted the major part of his program, but he also discussed several of the present day trends in poetic thought. The selected poems that he read and the interspersed explanations showed that Mr. Lindsay believes in a democratic broad-spirited development of our life in harmony with every kind of beauty and goodness. The expression with which he read his verse, and the wealth of meaning that he gave to it, were ample evidence of his inimitable sense of rhythm, and his depth and warmth of feeling.

In introducing Mr. Lindsay, Pres. Moody called attention to the enviable position that he holds in the estimation of people of culture the world over, and remarked upon the pride that Middlebury takes in its ability to provide cultured audiences.

In the opening part of his lecture, the troubadour discussed the period of the grand gesture, toward which he believes we are rapidly progressing. This grand gesture is typified by many great elements in our national life—by our towering skyscrapers and our huge national parks. Its rising influence is fast banishing Babbitism, and another generation will see the total disappearance of that outmoded type in the estimation of Mr. Lindsay.

To illustrate his conception of the grand gesture and its accompanying cavalier spirit he read his well known poem entitled, "Cavaliers," which brought hearty applause.

Mr. Lindsay also discussed the New England spirit and the influence that that section of the country has had on our life and thought. The two

A later contest will be held to obtain original music if suitable verses are found.

Middlebury Wins State Title for First Time Since 1918.

HUMESTON IS HIGH SCORER OF CONTEST

Blue and White Takes Lead Early in Game and Wins Easily.

By WARD S. YUNKER

After waiting for ten years, Middlebury has at last regained the Vermont State Basketball Championship. The Blue and White cage team defeated the University of Vermont on the home surface last night by a 48 to 31 score to bring the championship to Middlebury for the first time since the season of 1918-1919.

Vermont has ruled the basketball courts of the state with an iron hand since 1918 and Middlebury, the favorite for the title this year, has come through in impressive style to emancipate the rest of the league from the clutches of the Catamount. There has not been the slightest bit of doubt all season as to which team was the best of the league and Middlebury's victories only substantiate the claims made by this paper earlier in the season.

The game played with Vermont on the Burlington court was a tight guarding contest, but the game played on the local surface developed into a free scoring game into which all the thrills that the crowd clamored for were packed. Vermont put up a game but losing battle as the Panther crew relentlessly swept on to victory.

First Half.

Sorensen scored the first points of the game on a pretty side shot with Johnson following by adding a foul.

WHAT HE COULD HAVE DONE.

Thomas Arkle Clark, dean of men at the University of Illinois has made a list of ten things which he would do were he to go through college again. They are as follows:

1. Develop concentration. . . . work harder but not so long.
2. Learn to work while others are around.
3. Put more stress on learning how to get information than upon the information itself.
4. Find more difficult tasks to do.
5. Learn to speak in public.
6. Learn to play well some athletic game.
7. Learn to do one line of work particularly well.
8. Get better acquainted with his instructors.
9. Take fewer courses which are strictly practical.
10. Have an avocation which would bring him into close touch with men.

Those students who have already mastered numbers one and two are the ones who seldom spring that excuse, "I haven't time." They do have time because they do things more efficiently and in less time than the person who though always busy is always behind in his work.

Number three is an old principle of education. Few of us would be able to fill this column with facts learned in college a year or two after graduation but habits of thought and action, good or bad, will remain with us long after we get our degrees.

While there may be some who tackle bigger jobs than they can handle, most of us are often surprised when we find we have accomplished something that at first looked harder than our usual tasks.

The fifth accomplishment is one which is too rarely found among those whose education and experience should make them especially entertaining story tellers.

Athletic proficiency in at least one sport will yield more returns after graduation, perhaps, than while in college when youth itself insures fairly good health.

Numbers eight and ten emphasize the value of associations with other people. The wider our circle of acquaintances, both in number and variety, the broader will be our viewpoint.

All in all it is well worth while to take an inventory of what college is doing for us, using Dean Clark's or a similar set of definite goals as a standard.

WHAT! NO MORAL?

Supposing we should print this? Why? Because the editor-in-chief is sick with a sore throat, the associate editor has just finished taking some delayed finals and has plenty to do without writing edits that no one reads anyway—not even the proofreaders; one of the assistant editors is away on a debating trip; another is with him and only gets back in time to leave with the Glee Club; a third doesn't know we are writing this and has probably got a better alibi than any one else, so why call him up; the managing editor is trying to get the Kaleidoscope out for Junior Week—and that will keep him busy for two or three months yet.

And that's why we print this. (There isn't any moral so don't look for one.)

HERBERT HOOVER'S BOOK PRESENTED TO STARR LIBRARY

"De Re Metallica" Treatise of Mining Given by R. M. Collins, '89.

A copy of President-elect Herbert Hoover's and Mrs. Hoover's autographed translation of Agricola's "De Re Metallica" has been presented to the college library by Mr. Robert M. Collins, of the class of 1889. Mr. Collins was the former head of the Associated Press in London and at present is a member of the American colony in Paris.

"De Re Metallica" or "A Treatise of Mining" was presented to Mr. Collins by the Hoovers soon after it was published in 1912, bearing the inscription "To Robert Collins with compliments of H. C. Hoover." It is a beautifully bound book in white vellum and is profusely illustrated with old woodcuts and copies of old engravings.

The edition which was limited to about 400 copies was distributed among various schools and to friends by the translators, who made the translation from the original edition of 1556. The book contains a biographical introduction, annotations and appendices on the development of mining and metallurgical methods and process, geology, mineralogy and kindred subjects.

At the time of writing the book the Hoovers were both prominent in many scientific societies among which were the American Institute of Mining Engineers, Mining and Metallurgical Society of America, American Association for the Advancement of Science, etc. etc.

In the preface to the mining treatise the co-translators say in part: "We do not present 'De Re Metallica' as a work of 'practical' value. The methods and processes have long been superseded; yet surely such a milestone on the road of the development of one of the two most basic of human industrial activities is more worthy of preservation than thousands of volumes devoted to human destruction."

The translation was a "work of love" the Hoovers taking the work upon themselves as a hobby. It has had to find the moments of its execution in night hours, week-ends and holidays, in all extending over a period of about five years," the preface concludes.

COMMUNICATION

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CAMPUS:

The article on debating in the CAMPUS of February 20th mentions the fact that the debating team will meet New York University at Friends School in Brooklyn, N. Y. This is incorrect. The meeting between the two institutions will be in the evening at "Friends Seminary" in Manhattan.

I make this correction in order to avoid confusion as to the location of this debate.

Sincerely yours,

ELEANOR MANLEY '27 DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Eleanor Esther Manley '27 died very suddenly in Albany, N. Y., last Thursday afternoon. Miss Manley who since February 1 has been teaching at New York State College for Teachers was stricken with a heart attack upon her return from classes Thursday and died before a physician could be summoned.

Miss Manley was born in Brattleboro and received her preparatory school education at Brattleboro High School. While at Middlebury, Miss Manley was active in extra-curricula activities. She was president of the Student Government Association, associate editor of the 1927 Kaleidoscope, assistant editor of the CAMPUS, member of Banshee, honorary senior society, and of Pi Beta Phi sorority.

She was one of the recipients of the Dutton Fellowship and spent a year in study at the University of London. She was graduated from Middlebury in 1927 with high honors in English and with valedictory honors.

Desiring to obtain a master's degree, she entered Columbia last fall for graduate work in English, remaining there until February 1, when she began her duties at Albany where she taught English Literature, English composition and history.

WAMBA SAYS

You have heard of the beauty of women's necks, but did you notice Vachel's thyroid cartilage when he chanted his poetry.

Too bad the band didn't turn out for the Albany Law game. And last night again, the band did not turn out. The glee club needs much of their talent this week.

Did you notice the living checker board in the winter sports carnival last week? An oh-h-h, how it could "winter sport."

An effective way to have watch dogs catch tramps is to make tramps wear snow shoes.

Isn't it a shame that the co-eds don't compete in winter sports carnivals.

A hockey game between the Freshmen and Sophomores is a good way to have them get even with each other.

An informal is not an informal without staggs, but what can you call it if three quarters of the crowd are staggs?

Another marvelous thing about Vachel: How did he manage to bend his head back that way without seriously deforming his neck or ruining that collar?

Freshmen: Just because you have the pin now, don't think you are a regular member of the fraternity.

A. S. P. CONTINUES CAGE TOURNEY LEAD

K.D.R. Holds Second Berth; Neutrals Leave Cellar.

As the Intra-mural Basketball Tournament nears its close Alpha Sigma Phi continues to set the pace and seems almost certain of winning the cup. Kappa Delta Rho is right behind the leaders with only one game lost, but this contest was lost to A.S.P. and K.D.R. will not have an opportunity to wipe it out unless some other team first defeats the Alpha Sigs thus causing a tie. The Neutrals furnished this week's surprise by defeating Chi Psi thereby forsaking last place to Beta Psi.

B. K. 28; B. P. 21.

In a closely contested game the Beta Kappa quintet defeated Beta Psi by a score of 23-21. At half time the victors led by the score of 12-8. Led by Hoyt who scored 14 of their 21 points B. P. put up a much better battle than had been expected of them but it was not good enough to win. Kelley was high-scorer for the Beta Kaps with 10 points.

Neutrals 24; Chi Psi 22

The biggest upset of the week occurred when the Neutrals squeezed out a 24-22 from Chi Psi. The game was nip-and-tuck from beginning to end with the Neutrals showing an unbelievable improvement over their previous performances which enabled them to bring home their first win. At half time the score was tied, 12-12, and at no time during the game was one team more than two baskets ahead of the other. Giles Chase and Maurer of the Neutrals each sank a quartet of field goals, but Chase was also successful in one free toss which enabled him to tie for high-scoring honors with Williams, Chi Psi.

A. S. P. 32; D. K. E. 17

In the preliminary to the varsity game with Albany Law School, the pace-setting Alpha Sigma Phi quintet decisively defeated Delta Kappa Epsilon by a score of 32-17. Discouraged by their failure to obtain successful shots from close range, the Dekes added to the interest of the contest by making many long-distance attempts few of which were successful. Miller, A. S. P., was high scorer of the game with 13 points. The Deke's total was evenly divided among their regulars and substitutes of which there were many.

A. S. P. 28; D. U. 23.

Alpha Sigma Phi gave another demonstration of its prowess by defeating Delta Upsilon, 28-23, in the preliminary to the Vermont game. The game was fast and closely contested. At half time A. S. P. led, 22-10; during the second half, however, D. U. steadily over-took the victors' lead until they were within striking distance of a victory when the whistle blew. Paul starred for D. U. with nine points most of which were the results of long-shots. MacNary won the high-scoring honors with an even dozen markers.

K. D. R. VICTORIOUS IN INTRAMURAL WINTER SPORTS TOURNAMENT

Winner in Doubt Until Very End—D. U. Second—D. K. E., Third.

Kappa Delta Rho won the intramural winter sport carnival held on Friday and Saturday February 22 and 23, by scoring 26 points. This victory means that the cup remains and in their possession as they have already won two legs on it. Delta Upsilon was runner up having a total of 13 points while Delta Kappa Epsilon was third with 13 points closely followed by Alpha Sigma Phi with 10 points. Chi Psi was fourth with 8 points, Beta Kappa fifth with 5 points, and Sigma Phi Epsilon sixth with 1 point.

The contest was close throughout, the result being doubtful until the second day's events were completed. The carnival brought forth great enthusiasm and the events were closely watched. Coaches Beck, Clogston and Hessler officiated.

The summary of the events:

the rebound into the net for the third Panther counter.

The second period was fast, but devoid of scoring. Coach Clogston used his reserves frequently, but the Cats were unable to do much of anything even then.

Vermont made their only dangerous assault in the third period. A three man combination worked its way to the mouth of the Middlebury net where Douglas made a beautiful stop and in the wild scramble after the rebound, Douglas got possession of the puck and held on to it to prevent the only possible Catamount score.

Makela scored his third goal of the day on a beautiful solo dash up the ice. The freshman star split the defense and hammered the puck past goalie Hendricks. Kelley made the last goal by getting possession of the disc after a face-off and driving it past the Vermont goalie.

Captain Kelley played his last game in a Middlebury uniform as he will be graduated this June. Throughout the game, Kelley's stick handling kept the Vermonters guessing.

either team during the first half. We have yet to see the basketball game in which a personal foul does not occur in the first period. The game was rough and turned out to be a contest as to which team would get away with the most.

Chandler of Norwich opened the scoring with a long shot from near the sideline, but the Horsemen soon lost the lead when Johnson and Casey scored in quick succession and Johnson added another, followed by a technical foul which Humeston made good. Teachout came back for Norwich, and Casey again scored for Middlebury. They play seesawed back and forth, with Middlebury missing several shots by inches. The Cadets had a hard time denting the Blue defense and scored mostly from long distance shots. The half ended with the Panthers leading 16-12.

With the opening of the second period it was evident that things were going to happen and everyone was in for a battle. A brace of baskets by O'Donnell tied the score and then the fireworks started. Both teams roughed it up plenty, and several times players of both colleges were prostrated on the floor. Everyone walked or ran all over the floor without bothering to dribble, and although it was violating Hoyle's rules of order, several of the on lookers had to chuckle. When fouls were called, they were more often on Middlebury, and all but three of these were converted into points by the Cadets. The Blue did manage to get two free throws in this record half. To all outward appearances Norwich was living up to the rules of the game, when only two fouls were called on them. The Panthers, however, were registering baskets while all this was going on, and succeeded in matching a field goal or more for every foul shot that the Horsemen took. The Blue again took the lead after several minutes and held it throughout the game. Johnson accounted for the bulk of scoring in the half, although Humeston and Spooner each added a brace of baskets.

The game was one which everyone was glad to see come to an end, for the count told no true story. Chandler, a freshman just eligible at Norwich, was the big gun in the home team lineup with 12 points to his credit, while Johnson with seven double counters led the scoring for the Blue and White.

Chances are that the next game at Northfield will be played in the new Armory, which in itself will be a help.

D.F.H.

Middlebury 28; Dartmouth 23.

Wednesday at Hanover before a capacity crowd Dartmouth was met and taken over much to their surprise and, needless to say, disgust. The floor was the largest the Blue team has played on this year, yet they proved that the size of a court meant nothing to their brand of basketball. If anything they showed up better than ever before.

The Big Green was outplayed in every department of the game, and although it was a fight all through, the Blue aggregation never conceded a point which was not earned. The Panther defense entirely baffled the Green quintet and rangy and fast as they were they could not penetrate it as was shown by the fact that they scored only two field goals in the final period, and only six throughout the entire game. An equal share of the Green's points came via the foul route, and again the writer denies the fact that many of these free throws should ever have been granted, which is only another way of saying certain things about certain people.

With three of their best men available, who had been ineligible the earlier part of the season, Dartmouth had high hopes of starting out anew on a series of games which would eventually land them near the top of the slate of intercollegiate basketball. The jolt they received was entirely unlooked for.

Spaeth, the Green captain, started the scoring with a long shot from in front of the basket just within the front line of the Blue defense. Johnson then registered for Middlebury and Sorensen put the Blue ahead a moment later with a foul shot. Cheney sent Dartmouth into the lead again with a pretty side shot, but the advantage was lost when Sorensen counted with a closeup shot which went clean. Spooner then sank a foul as did Cheney, followed by a hair-raising shot by Humeston from deep in the corner. Dartmouth then sent in a flock of substitutes which did not help matters any, and the half ended with the Panthers leading 14-11.

With the opening of the final period Johnson sank a side shot which was followed soon after by a foul thrown by Sorensen. The Green came back with two free throws by Spaeth and Hein. Johnson added a double counter for the Blue and Austin shot one for the weak side. On two successive double fouls Casey made his tries good, while the Green added only one to their score. With the closing minutes in sight the Dartmouth crew began to feel not a little peeved and ran wild in a futile attempt to garner a few needed points. The Panthers were still on the floor, however, and managed to sink a point here and there. The game ended with the Blue a big five points to the good and several newly acquired admirers as a result of the game battle they staged.

Twelve men, several of whom were substituted twice or more, took the floor against the Blue in the course of the evening, but it looked as though what Hanover needed was more men on the floor at one time. Johnson, Sorensen and Humeston were the leading scorers for the Panthers while Capt. Spaeth and Cheney were the only members of the Green squad who were able to find the net with any regularity. Incidentally the familiar "Wah-Hoo-Wah" was not heard after the game as is often the case when a Dartmouth team finishes a contest.

Middlebury 42; Albany Law 25.

Captain Spooner and his Blue, and White basketball team soundly trounced the Albany Law five on the home court Friday night by the overwhelming score of 42 to 25. Middlebury went into the lead at the very outset and after the first minute, the game was not even close. The home team scored at will and most of the Albany Law points were made on long shots some of which were heaved from beyond the middle of the floor.

The New Yorkers started their second team, but their psychology was off and the Panther team ran up team points before the Lawyers knew what it was all about. After the Albany varsity came on the floor the game tightened up a bit, but even they were no match for the flashy Blue quintet.

Sorensen was hurt in a scrimmage under the Middlebury hoop and a few minutes later, fearing that his flashy forward was not up to par, Coach Beck put Bullukian in his place. Bullukian immediately snapped a pass to Johnson and "Johnnie" obligingly converted the pass into two points.

Play slowed down materially as the half neared its close. The Panther crew were leading by such a wide margin that they let up a bit. The half ended with Middlebury leading by a 25 to 11 score.

The Lawyers opened up the second half with a bang and scored eight points before the Middlebury team could get started. The Blue and White defense then tightened and put the brakes on so that in a few minutes the lead had been increased still further.

Maynard and Ashdown were substituted for Humeston and Johnson, but the Albany players could make no headway. Casey who had been playing a stellar game was taken out and Boisseau took his place. Still the Lawyers were unable to do much. Although they tried hard, the Albanyites were no match for the Panther quintet. The five man zone defense had them guessing and they were unable to penetrate it at all, while the Middlebury offense swept through to score at will.

Casey played one of the best games of his career and scored eleven points which was high for the night. Humeston played his usual strong game while the rest of the team played well. It was just a case of a strong well balanced team outplaying a weaker opponent.

FRESHMEN DEFEAT SOPHS AT HOCKEY

Makela and Nelson Star in 9 to 0 Victory Over 1931.

The freshmen hockey team decisively defeated the sophomore sextet 9-0 in the first annual freshmen-sophomore hockey game, Friday morning as part of the Winter Sports Carnival. The game was in favor of the victors from beginning to end with the Sophomores only threatening once.

First Period.

The game started with the freshmen immediately showing their superiority by keeping the puck in sophomore territory continually. After about four minutes of play, Makela from a scrimmage in front of the Sophomore cage scored the first tally and a minute later his teammate, Nelson, repeated the act. After the second goal, the freshmen made five substitutions and the play was ragged and rough on both sides until the period ended with the score 2-0 in favor of the freshmen.

Second Period.

In less than one minute of play, Nelson dribbled the whole length of the ice unassisted through the sophomore team and drew the goalie out to slip in the third freshmen goal. Four minutes later, Makela scored another from a scrimmage in front of the goal, and two minutes later, he repeated his act from a face-off making the score 5-0.

Third Period.

Before the third period had been underway more than a minute, Makela slid an easy one from center ice through the goalie's legs. Five minutes later, Mansfield unassisted drove the puck into the net, to be followed a minute later by tallies by Makela and Melbye from scrimmages. The remainder of the game was uneventful with many substitutions. The whistle blew with the final score 9-0 in favor of the Freshmen.

REV. L. M. SWEET TALKS AT VESPERS

"God's Accessibility to Those with Vision" His Subject.

Rev. L. M. Sweet Ph.D. of the Biblical Seminary of New York won the undivided attention of a large gathering of students and alumni at Sunday Vespers by a few apt touches of humor which relieved the serious trend of his talk. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God" was the text upon which his thoughts were based. And first of all he differentiated between "happy" and "blessed".

"If one could really see God it would make things worth while," he said. "Jesus says he who sees God is blessed. He uses the word 'blessed' not 'happy'. When we consider happiness we find that there is nothing more illusive. It you pursue it, it will run away, but if you forget it, it will run after it. But two questions occur to me: is it likely to stick when it is most needed; and is it worth while after it is obtained? Blessedness is another thing, deeper, broader, more elastic. It is a word that has been captured by religion. Jesus did not use it restrictively. To Him it was a real human thing. Happiness is too capricious. It is apt to identify itself with momentary, superficial things. We say we get a kick out of something. But we really don't want a momentary thrill. We want a deep sense of well-being—the kind of football player might have at the end of a well played game. When a man has begun to learn, and has caught a glimpse into real living, that is a blessing. And there is a still deeper meaning, the consciousness of being at home in a friendly universe. A man is blessed when he sees God, Jesus said. He said we can see God.

"But there are different kinds of seeing. A man presents an argument and you say 'I see'. A blind man says, when he shakes your hand, 'I'm glad to see you'. Some men can see scientifically, as did Darwin. Some can see artistically. That is, they see not merely the paint on the canvas, but what was in the artist's mind. And some men can see spiritually. As the landscape is outside for the eyes to see, so God, in His supremacy, is outside waiting for an open heart. There has been discussion about the need of a new theology. It is not new ideas about God that we need, but new vision. A new and better theology will come by great experiences, by new perceptions.

"Jesus says 'Blessed are the pure in heart,' that the only way to see God is through pureness of heart. This sounds as if He means goodness. But He means more than that, fundamentally. He means sincerity plus that peculiar passion that animates and controls those in search of the thing they are bound to obtain. You see what you are fitted to see, and you are fitted to see the things you are looking for. All the teachings of Jesus concentrate on God's accessibility, His nearness. 'He that has seen me has seen the Father' He is not far from any of us."

Ohio State May Bar all Hazing.

Columbus, O., Feb. 17—"Rough Stuff" fraternity hazing was barred at Ohio State University by action of a faculty committee last week.

The "informal initiations" of the fraternities, under the committee's orders, must not last longer than 36 hours, and must be "confined to the premises."

Since the "rough stuff" put on by the fraternities in the usual Hell Week that precedes the administration of the formal ritual, is the only vestige of hazing left on this campus, the faculty order means that within a few years hazing will be a thing of the past.

It has been years since freshmen were hazed by sophomores at Ohio State, for there is virtually no class spirit left at the university. Class spirit is hard to work up among 3,000 freshmen.

The Ohio State Lantern, undergraduate daily, has been editorializing against hazing for some time as a "childish" practice.—(IP).

FLOATING COLLEGE TO CONFER DEGREES

Revised Charter Permits Offering of B. A., M. A. and B. W. A.

For the first time in the history of American education regular academic degrees will be conferred on the high seas, according to announcements from the home office of Floating University at 11 Broadway. While the students and faculty of this co-ed travel university are steaming from Penang to Calcutta, the news is made public that a revised charter enables Floating University to confer degrees, beginning with the college year 1929-30.

Accordingly the university will offer programs of study leading to the B. A., M. A., and B. W. A. degrees. The B. W. A. (Bachelor of World Affairs) is a new degree, not conferred elsewhere and is based on the concept that the study of History, Government, Economics, and Sociology on a world wide scale is valuable training for the student planning to enter public affairs, the diplomatic and consular services, or international business.

To win the B. W. A. the student may take his first two years of college in a land institution, and spend his Junior and Senior years in an intensive study of the courses in the World Affairs division of the Floating University curriculum. Or the student may spend all four years with Floating University.

The M. A. degree will differ from the usual master's degree, in that individual research and a thesis are required. The student complies data during the round-the-world cruise, and completes his thesis with the aid of a European or American library.

The B. A. can be won in Junior and Senior years, with major in literature or art. A few well qualified Seniors can be accepted as candidates for the degree in one year, with major in art or literature; French; history, government, economics or sociology; or philosophy, religion and ethics.

Floating University will also confer a certificate on all students not candidates for a degree who successfully complete the requirements for a full year's work. An official Bulletin, giving these requirements as well as those for the degrees, will be mailed to colleges and universities after February 25th.

The revised charter was made possible, Floating University officials say, in part by the reception American educators have given its curriculum, and in part by the extremely favorable reports that have been coming back from every country the University has visited this year. Cubans, Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Siamese and British have been greatly impressed with the seriousness of purpose displayed by these American students.

Minneapolis, Minn.—(IP)—When committees for the Freshman Hop were selected, not a woman was named on them. The University of Minnesota co-eds thereupon set up a hue and cry, which was answered by those who made the appointments with the statement that not a woman member of the appointing committee had showed up for a meeting this year, and it was taken for granted that they wanted the men to run things.

"Mabel has a secret sorrow."

"I know, she was telling me about it."

Freshmen Win Their First Game From Sophomores

The Freshmen won by a ten point margin 27-17 from the Sophomores in the second round of the women's inter-class games held in the McCullough gymnasium Tuesday evening, February 19. It was a hard fought game, the Freshmen determined to make this their first victory and the Sophomores offered plenty of opposition. The first half was fast but characterized by slugging and consequent fumbling. As a whole, the guards of both teams did work superior to that of the forwards. By the third quarter the score was 19-14 in favor of the Freshmen who were thoroughly warmed up to the game. Their passing was low and far more accurate than in any previous contest.

Legate put in some pretty work for the Sophomores in the back court under the hoop. Hosley as guard was fast and intercepted numerous passes. Omwake, Freshmen guard, and Harris forward, were the outstanding players of the evening. Harris had 14 points to her credit, while Legate made a total of 11 points for the Sophomores. The line-up:

Sophomores		Freshmen

Princeton 7; Middlebury 2

The Middlebury hockey team met Princeton in the Hobey Baker Memorial Arena on last Tuesday and was defeated by the great Tiger sextet by the score of 7 to 2. The Blue and White team fought hard throughout, but the heavier Princeton men were too much for them and they were forced to succumb.

Princeton scored four goals in the first period when the Panther players were struck with a slight attack of stage fright. Coach Neidlinger sent 14 Tiger players into his lineup and this constant influx of fresh men kept the Middlebury team in the defensive.

After the stage fright of the first period had worn off, the Panther fought back tooth and claw and the Princeton crew were only able to score three more goals to the Blue and White's two. Foote tallied for Middlebury when goalie Ingersoll was drawn out of the net during a scrimmage and Captain Kelley scored the other tally. The lineups:

Middlebury 3; Williams 2

Williams was defeated at hockey in an overtime game on last Wednesday. The Middlebury sextet played brilliantly throughout and more than made up for the defeat the day before. Captain Kelley scored the deciding goal in the overtime period.

Both teams played fast hockey and for the most part the play was even as the teams appeared very well matched. Kelley and Nelson scored for Middlebury to tie up the score and send the game into a sudden death period which Kelley's goal ended. The lineups:

ALPHA SIGMA PHI HAS FORMAL DANCE

The season's first fraternity formal, the annual dance of the Alpha Delta Chapter of Alpha Sigma Phi was held at the Middlebury Inn on Thursday evening. Members, pledges and friends of the fraternity, totaling thirty-six couples enjoyed dancing from 7:30 until 11:40. The Black Panther Serenaders with eight men furnished the dance music which was delightfully varied and this fact was in a large part the cause of the great success of the dance.

Novelty dances of various kinds, and effective lighting arrangements also added much to the aspect of joy and revelry which existed. Appropriate favors were distributed to the young ladies present. Punch was served during the evening and at the intermission the dancers enjoyed ice cream and cake.

The patrons and patronesses in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Wiley, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond I. Barney, Mrs. Maude O. Mason, and Mrs. J. Moreno Lacalle.

Besides the fraternity members and pledges the following guests were present: Warren R. Witt, B. K., William L. Benson, B. P., Folke Gruggel, C. P., Albert E. Willis, D. K. E., Forrest J. Spooner, D. U., Henry E. Hunt, K. D. R., Chauncey A. Niles, S. P. E., and Kenneth A. Shuts.

Troubadour Speaks to Large Audience

characters, John Brown and "Johnny Appleseed," he believes are the unique production of a New England environment. Calling attention to the fact that he believes that his poem is but a mere imitation of Stephen Vincent Benet's famous "John Brown's Body," Mr. Lindsay sang his splendid poetic treatment of the subject. At his request the audience came in with him on the chorus and the effect produced was remarkable for its vividness. This method of intoning poetry is unique with Lindsay and is made doubly effective by the perfect quality of his rich mellow voice.

The troubadour devoted a few minutes to a discussion of the pleasure that he derived from a recent reading of Emerson's journals, and spoke of the similarities that exist between Emerson and Thoreau. He then went on to discuss John Chapman, better known as "Johnny Appleseed," and his picturesque work and influence upon our great middle west. Lindsay believes that Chapman's mystical union with nature, and his great faith in nature as his idol, are but an expression of ideas found on every page of Thoreau. The troubadour then read selections from his poem, "In Praise of Johnny Appleseed," and received most hearty applause.

One of the most interesting and unique theories advanced by Mr. Lindsay was his belief in the possibility of dancing to poetry instead of to music. He maintained that a person at all interested in literature could step off to a poem far more easily than to a tune. And he firmly believes that the effect of such dancing would be much more rhythmical than is the case with the present method. He is quite convinced that there is more music in poetry than in any other form of art, and that to appreciate poetry one must read it aloud, although even that is but a makeshift, and does not bring out the real musical quality of verse.

Mr. Lindsay closed his lecture by reading his well known poem, entitled "The Congo". He remarked that he is invariably requested to read this poem wherever he appears, and that only the night before his Middlebury appearance he had refused to recite it before an audience in Brooklyn. The reading of "The Congo" which its author claims is a memorial to a missionary who died in Africa, brought forth tumultuous applause.

After the lecture Mr. Lindsay met informally in the vestry of the church members of his audience.

VIEWPOINTS

The Last Minute Men.

The poor student who delays his work until the last few days of the semester has long been the object of professional exhortation.

This student turns in all required work, a trifle late, perhaps slightly condensed, but practically always intact. The reward? He is lucky to rate more than the traditional "D."

Often his results are of a higher quality than those of the student who is content to remit the assignments as per schedule. Many times it is of at least average ranking. The semester grades, however, have never been known to inspire the recipient to greater endeavors.

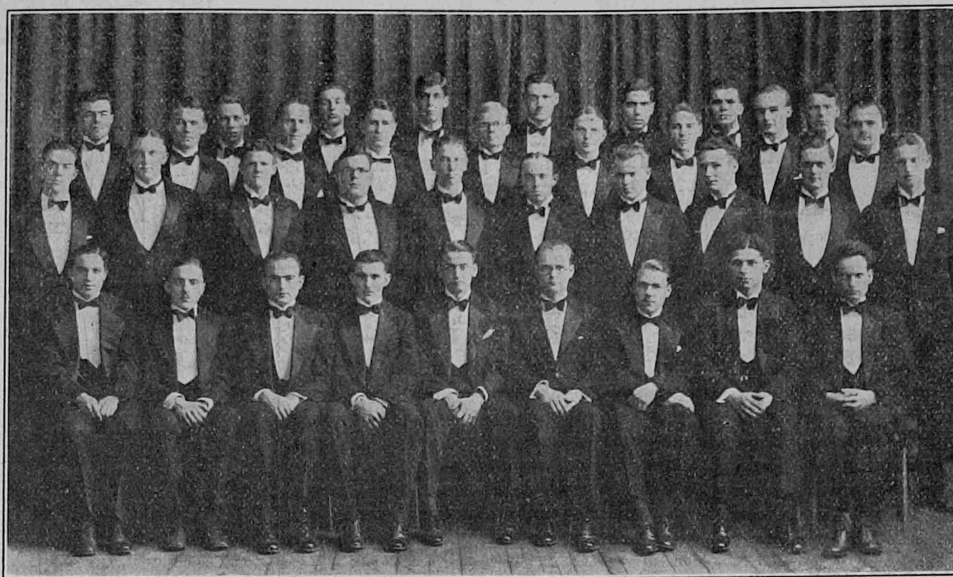

Why should the so-called dilettante student be verbally lammed by unanimous faculty opinion? Regarding him as though he were purely a laboratory specimen, why doesn't he deserve the highest grades?

In the commercial world the high-pressure worker who can turn out even ordinary work is always suitably rewarded. It's the man capable of quantity production on short notice who is in demand. He who can outline a selling campaign over night, or design a building, or write a novel, is a valued man.

Therefore the student who is capable of turning out the semester's work in two days should be regarded with awe. Phi Beta Kappa should be proud to honor him as one of its own. Such a student demonstrates his caliber by his actions.—The Daily Iowan.

Mr. S. Fuller Martin ex-'26 writes us that he is enjoying his work with the F. W. Woolworth Co., 120 No. Main St., Herkimer, N. Y.

Panther Trounces Catamount Five

Palmer made good on a gift shot and then Sargent dropped one in from the side to tie the count. Wallace sank a field goal and was fouled in the act, making good on both free tries to put Vermont in the lead 7 to 3. Halligan fouled Humeston and "Dick" sank the try, but Palmer retaliated with a foul. Spooner made good on a free try and then sank a pretty field goal. Morse sank a foul and then Palmer added another. Johnson made two pretty field goals to put Middlebury into the lead and the Panther held the lead to the end, increasing it as the game progressed. Casey added a foul and Estabrook and Morse were injected into the Vermont lineup. Spooner looped one in from the side while Palmer did likewise. Casey was fouled by Estabrook and made good on both tries and Johnson followed with a foul. Humeston sank a pretty basket and then Manning was sent in place of Bernstein. Humeston scored another goal. Sorensen fouled Wallace and had to leave the game on personals, Bullukian taking his place. Wallace sank the free try. Bullukian made a free try good and Humeston added two foul shots to make the score 24 to 13 in Middlebury's favor at half time.

Second Half.

Spooner sank a foul to start the second half. Bullukian sank a pretty one hand shot and Johnson added a charity point. Humeston sent one swishing through the strings and Sargent added two points to the Vermont total. Halligan made good a foul shot as Spooner went out of the fray via the personal foul route, Willis taking his place. Humeston sank another field goal and Halligan dropped in a free try. Johnson added a basket and once more Halligan added a free try. Bullukian made good on two charity shots as Sargent went out on personals. A few minutes later Halligan went out on personals and Manning and Bernstein were substituted. Humeston and Casey added baskets and Estabrook dropped in a free try. Johnson added a foul and a basket and followed a few minutes later with another twin decker. Franzoni was substituted for Johnson and Ashdown for Bullukian, but the Vermont team could make no headway. Humeston added another basket and a foul and then Maynard was substituted for "Dick." Estabrook added a foul while Casey was dropping in a basket and a foul. Vermont scored another basket and a foul to leave the score at 48 to 31 as the game ended.

Middlebury the Better Team.

There was not much question after the first few minutes as to which team would win. The Blue and White was superior in every department of play. The five man zone defense kept the Vermonters at bay and they had a lot of trouble penetrating it for short shots while the Panther offense wormed its way through the Cats' defense quite readily.

Johnson had hard luck in his shooting as many of his shots rolled around the hoop, but failed to drop, but even at that he scored twelve points. Humeston was high scorer for the evening with six double deckers and four fouls for the total of sixteen points. Casey and Spooner played wonderful defensive games. Sorensen played great ball until put out of the game via personals while Bullukian was all over the court during his period of play.

The home crowd was treated to the sight of a Middlebury team completely overwhelming a Vermont cage five and they enjoyed it immensely. The winter sports seem to be making out real successfully with two state championships. The lineups:
